

The Paul Revere of Rivers

Critical Information for Better Business Decisions

When severe flooding struck the central U.S. April 26 through 29, 2009, many were caught unaware by its speed and severity. Hundreds of roads and railways and even one U.S. interstate highway were closed along with schools and hospitals. Homes, too numerous to count, were flooded in four states.

But clients of AccuWeather Enterprise Solutions, knew to prepare three days before the rains arrived. Insurance and disaster recovery companies geared up. Transportation companies knew they would have to reroute. Utilities planned for flooded infrastructure.

Floods affect all of the United States, and occur during all seasons of the year. If your business can benefit from proactively managing the risks and opportunities presented by high impact weather, give us a call today!
